

Allison Marino

Module 8

I hate clutter. I hate it with a passion. So while my folder for my WRA 210 coursework was piling up with new documents and designs, my mind was going into panic mode. Why is everything so cluttered? Why does it take forever to find something? Will I ever figure out which is the document I want to pull up? Thankfully, Module 8 came around and I figured out I could organize my documents cache into neat little folders and still have them published on my course page. PHEW.

I organized my documents based on their module. While this seems a little basic, it really helps me organize my thoughts as to when I did something. Plus I like how the numbers are in order and the files are sorted alphabetically. I also added a folder for design revisions in addition to the folder of the copies of the design documents that I already created to make my zip file. Items that I had not worked with yet, or that didn't have a place (like the index.html file) stayed in the main folder for my portfolio and course page. This was simply because I didn't want to clutter up my folder with extraneous folders that didn't have any purpose besides a miscellaneous documents repository. All in all, I really like how much cleaner my computer feels.